B. Conclusion

- Tea and Coffee are the most popular products and should always be well stocked.
- Cold Coffee, Veg Biryani, and Veg Pizza have very low demand and should be reviewed for pricing, promotion, or menu optimization.

Using a price split of:

- Lower-priced: ≤ 100
- Higher-priced: > 100

Price Category	Quantity Sold
Lower-priced Items	424
Higher-priced Items	149

Conclusion
Customers purchase significantly more lower-priced items than higher-priced items.
This suggests:
Lower-priced products drive volume.
Higher-priced products contribute less to quantity sold and may require promotions or combo offers

Items ordered across three or more meal types demonstrate strong cross-meal demand and customer acceptance. These products should be retained and potentially promoted because they have opportunities to generate sales throughout the day. Items ordered in more than one meal type also indicate broader demand and should be evaluated based on their quantity and sales performance. However, an item should not be discontinued solely because it is ordered in only one meal type. Discontinuation should be considered only for items with consistently low quantity sold, low sales contribution, and limited demand.
